IRENE GODDU

Irene Goddu - paints peaceful settings and places to ponder in New Hampshire and around New England. Looking to create an emotional response that calms the soul, Irene enjoys being able to take you back to a place you may have been and to evoke the pleasant memories. Her paintings include New England Architectural details and New England landscape with all its diversity, with mountains, valleys, lakes, rivers and ocean. There are also paintings showing a love for the beauty of flowers, especially a personal connection for irises.

Irene's medium of choice is watercolor with a style that is self taught as a balance between realism and impressionism, where the realism is more painterly instead of being photo realistic. Her paintings receive numerous awards in local, regional, and international exhibits and are part of many corporate and private collections. Born in Lowell, Massachusetts, Irene has been dedicated to a career in art since 1991. Formerly a resident of Nashua, New Hampshire for 22 years with her husband, Leo and three children, the family now enjoys living in Laconia, New Hampshire.
